Protect U.S. Families Holds Republican Members of Congress Accountable for Rising Energy Costs in Pennsylvania

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, Protect U.S. Families (PUSF) launched an ad campaign in Pennsylvania's Congressional Districts 1, 8, and 10 designed to highlight the impact of rising gas prices and hold Republican Representatives Brian Fitzpatrick and Scott Perry accountable for their roles in the increase. Both Representatives voted to throw away a limit on liquefied natural gas (LNG) exports. According to a recent report from Public Citizen, LNG exports have contributed to a 52% increase in natural gas prices for U.S. families since 2016. Meanwhile, the campaign commends Democratic Congressman Matt Cartwright for his efforts to prioritize Pennsylvania families by voting to limit liquefied natural gas exports.

The ads will run across multiple platforms, including digital, radio, and print newspapers, over a two-week period. With a total ad spend of $110,000, this marks the final investment from PUSF for the 2024 election cycle. To date, PUSF has invested over $1 million in efforts to advocate for policies that benefit American families.

"Ever feel like your energy bill is going up and up and up?

You're not the only one.

Energy bills in Pennsylvania have been soaring when our families can least afford it.

We need all the resources we have right here in the Commonwealth and across the country to help make things cheaper.

But instead, Big Oil and Gas CEOs are driving prices up, selling US energy overseas in places like China so they can improve their record profits.

Less energy here at home means bigger bills for us.

We're lucky our own Congressman Matt Cartwright told them to stop. He voted to limit gas exports.

Our energy should benefit our communities.

But Pennsylvania families would pay all the costs for increased gas exports, like more pollution and higher energy bills, while Big Oil and Gas CEOs get all the rewards.

Call Congressman Cartwright at (202) 225-5546 and thank him for standing up to Big Oil and Gas CEOs and fighting to lower our energy prices.

Less energy here at home means bigger bills for us.

And their political allies in Washington want to let them.

Our Congressman Scott Perry voted to throw out any limit on gas exports.

Our energy should benefit our communities.

But Pennsylvania families would pay all the costs for increased gas exports, like more pollution and higher energy bills, while Big Oil and Gas CEOs get all the rewards.

Call Congressman Perry at (202) 225-5836 and tell him to stop rising energy prices by keeping American energy here.
